

My superhero's name is Mr. Godly Power. Mr. Godly Power's power is to Fly, strike lightning, blast fire, blast ice, and control the wind and earth. These are best known as the 4 elements. My superhero is an African American man who has a blue and gray cape, green tights, green and yellow gloves, purple ice boots and a grey afro. My superhero's secret identity is his real name which is Mark Davis and lives in New York City working as a manager for a newspaper company that his father passed down to him. His twin brother recently died in a tragic Geostorm that almost destroyed the entire city. But lucky for Mark he survived that attack.

One day Mr. Davis was cleaning out the attic of his home when he found an old box of his dad's with a letter connected to it and weird clothes at the bottom. It was a message from his dad letting him know about a prophecy and informing him about his family's superpower. About 2000 years ago his father's great, great, great, great, great grandfather was a part of a supernatural nuclear gamma ray explosion and gained superpowers through supernatural-gamma ray-radioactive poisoning. The superpowers are passed down from generation to generation and it usually takes a traumatic event for the powers to show up. He also tells him about his uncle Jim, his father's twin evil brother who his father killed because he was evil. Mr. Davis learns that today is the day he finds out he has to kill his brother before he tries to take over the world and that his brother is not really dead. His brother too had found out about his power and has been planning to take over the world for the past five years. He sits there shaking, never expecting today, out of his 18 years of living, he'd have to kill his twin. But what if he could convert him back to the good side and save him? It's all up to him to find out what he is going to do. His only weakness is his twin brother because for years he looked up to him and could never beat him up when they were kids. He was determined to overcome that weakness and defeat him or possibly save him?
